Choose From a Palette of Hues

At Advanced Window Products, we can guide you through your selection of color samples. Here are some ways to pick out shades when deciding on the color of your vinyl siding to give you abiding pleasure when you look at your home:

- Take a variety of color samples outside and look at them in natural daylight.
- Play with color pairs to find the combination that draws you in, with trim and accent colors to complement them.
- Note that dark, rich hues will take on a mellower appearance with the passage of time. So if you want that espresso-hued brown or any other earthy tones, do it. Make a statement that your house is solid. Black shutters or primary colors will pair with deep tones for striking beauty. Wheat also complements rich tones.
- A bold, primary color like red vinyl siding attracts the eye, and people will respond to and remember the color. Select softer tones, such as a light blue vinyl siding and your home's architectural details will be what people notice when they look at your home.

- Consider how your home's siding will complement nearby houses. Notice of how rich or subtle their hues are, and consider matching their mood.

Whether you're planning to hold onto your home or sell, its value mainly depends on its attractiveness to the market. While bright sunny yellow vinyl siding says "joy!", you may attract more potential buyers with a paler shade. Consider classic shades and neutrals if you're shaping up your home's exterior for selling. The best of both worlds might be a classic dusk green vinyl siding—neutral yet intriguing, smartly set off with deep slate-toned or black shutters.
