Vinyl vs. Aluminum

Vinyl ensures better energy efficiency, reduced noise interference, and less condensation. Vinyl windows cannot be painted like aluminum. They are made up of durable material that lasts decades. These windows can be cleaned by quickly wiping, and they will look like a brand new windows.

Vinyl vs. Wood

Purchasing and installing vinyl windows is cheaper as compared to wooden window frames. Unlike wood, which is affected by adverse weather conditions creating air leakage, vinyl windows provide an airtight seal, enhancing energy efficiency. One of the best features of vinyl windows is that they require almost no maintenance. Unlike wood, there is no chance of warping or pest infestation, such as carpenter ants or termites. Moreover, these windows never need to be painted. Vinyl window colors don't fade for the life of the window.

For Whom Is Vinyl Window Suitable?

- For those working on a fairly tight budget, vinyl windows have the most value for your money. It enables you to save on vinyl replacement windows costs.
- Do you want to utilize energy effectively? Vinyl is the best choice if you are looking into saving on energy costs.
- If you are majorly concerned with the long-term durability of your windows for decades without vinyl window repair, vinyl is the best purchase option.

Styles of Vinyl Windows

Double-Hung Windows

Double-hung windows are easy to open and operate with minimal effort. The lower and upper belts can be moved up and down independently, making it easier to clean. The flexibility of these double-hung windows makes them functional, beautiful, and energy-saving.

Casement and Awning Windows

These models are custom-made to enable better circulation of air and clear views but less flexible. Casement and awning windows design function perfectly and enhance beauty and energy efficiency. The difference between the two is the position of the hinges. Awning windows have the hinge at the top while casements have their hinge on the left or right side.

Sliding Windows

Sliding windows are fancy window designs whose hinges slide horizontally rather than vertically as in a single or double-hung type. They come in different configurations that provide superior ventilation and durability.

Picture Windows

Picture windows provide plenty of light and unlimited view and most importantly, they improve the appearance of your home and help to save energy.

Bay and Bow Windows

Bay and bow windows create the illusion of a larger room and are great at creating room for extra storage space, sitting areas, or hidden compartments.

Garden Windows

Garden Windows are preferred for the display of horticultural know-how. They bring the outdoors in for more light and beauty.
